

GAeF financially supports students to participate at the International Aerosol Conference 2022 organized as hybrid event by the HAAR (Hellenic Association for Aerosol Research) in Athens (Greece). Online participation is supported to the extent of the participation fees. Support for participation in the conference in Athens will be a maximum of 500€. GAeF reserves the right to adjust the amount as soon as the IAC2022 registration conditions become available.

GAeF Student members who would like to obtain a support to participate at the conference online or in person should send an application together with the acceptance letter of their abstract to Dr. Birgit Wehner (birgit[at]tropos.de) no later than 1 July 2022.

- To obtain a support, a student must be member of GAeF (latest by 1 June 2022).
- A student ID or a confirmation of the official supervisor is needed
- A copy of the acceptance letter (oral or poster) received from IAC 2022.

There is a limited number of grants available only. The final selection will be based on the extended abstract reviewed by the IAC 2022 program committee and by the GAeF board. The share between supported online and in person participation will be made after the conference fees have been announced and the applications received have been reviewed.